

Cask Ale

Here at The Coachman, we are proud to be particularly fussy about our Cask Ales. Cask is a passion of Justin, our Landlord, and we are also recognised by Timothy Taylors Brewery as one of their very few "Champion Pubs" (only awarded to pubs who strive for consistent quality of Timothy Taylor Ales)

GREY GOOSE

GREY GOOSE is distilled in the gastronomy capital of the world, France, using the traditions of the Maitre de Chai. They use only two ingredients: single-origin Picardie winter wheat and natural spring water.

The Origin Of Vodka

If you thought vodka's birthplace was in the snow-covered lands of Mother Russia, you would be mistaken. But you're not alone; millions of people think vodka was first crafted in Russia. The truth is Poland created this spirit as early as the 8th century.

MOUNT GAY
Est. 1703 Barbados Rum

Mount Gay 1703 rum includes rums aged between 10 and 30 years that are joined by master distiller Allen Smith. Mount Gay Distilleries is the oldest operating distillery in the Americas - producing rum in Barbados since 1703, hence the rum's name. It's original name was Mount Gilboa, and in 1801 renamed Mount Gay after the distillery's manager Sir John Gay Alleyne.

JOHNNIE WALKER.
Blue Label

Johnnie Walker Blue Label is created using a selection of rare casks from the Speyside and Highland distilleries – including delicate Cardhu and Clynelish, warm, rounded Benrinnes, as well as Islay malts for our signature smokiness.

Know your Whisky

Scotch is a whisky (no e) that gets its distinctive smoky flavor from the process in which it is made: the grain, primarily barley, is malted and then heated over a peat fire. A whisky cannot be called Scotch unless it is entirely produced and bottled in Scotland.

Bourbon, a whiskey that was first produced in Kentucky, U.S., uses at least 51 percent mash from corn in its production. It also uses a sour mash process — that is, the mash is fermented with yeast and includes a portion from a mash that has already been fermented. U.S. regulations specify that in order for a whiskey to be called bourbon, it must be made in the United States.

And rye whiskey? It's a whiskey that uses a rye mash or a rye and malt mash. In the United States, regulations stipulate that the mash must be at least 51 percent rye in order for it to be called rye whiskey. In Canada, regulations do not specify a minimum percentage of rye.

Single Malts

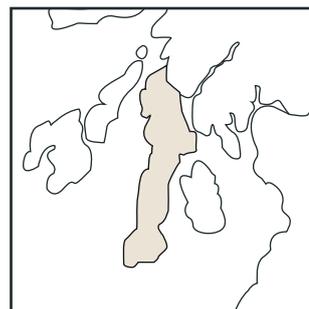

Here at The Coachman, just like with our Cask Ales, we are super passionate about Single Malt Whiskies; so much so that the back snug is our dedicated Whisky Bar with its own roaring fire!

We have started building a list of Whiskies from all six Scottish Single Malt regions, and we hope to add to this over the years to come. Whilst we endeavor to ensure that all the whiskies are available, due to the nature of cost and special delivery timescales, on occasion, some of these Malts may be out of stock.

Campbeltown

Campbeltown was once a thriving malt whisky region with no fewer than 34 distilleries – no mean feat for a small and remote settlement at the bottom of the Kintyre peninsula. Now only 3 remain, and as such due to its rarity, its rather hard to come by, so we make sure we enjoy and savour the ones we have!

Highland

Scotland's largest whisky producing region boasts a dizzying array of styles from rich and textured to fragrantly floral, as befits an ever-changing landscape of coastline, moor & mountain. Even without the famed Speyside enclave, you'll find some of whiskies most famous names here.

Island

There are nearly 800 islands scattered off Scotland's crenellated coastline, of which only a few are inhabited – and fewer still have a distillery. Excluding the whisky hotspot of Islay, the islands of Arran, Mull, Jura, Skye, Lewis & Orkney are home to an eclectic mix of styles, from light citrus to full on peat smoke.

Islay

The Southernmost of its island chain, Islay is known as "The Queen of The Hebrides" – and is the reigning monarch of a typically smoky, peaty style of single malt whisky. But there's much more to this beating heart of distillation, which has eight active producers – and more top come.

Here is our selection; –

Lowland

There's more distillation in the Lowlands than any other Scottish region, but it's days as a significant single malt player are consigned to history. This is the home to the Blend, and of the large quantities of grain whisky which form its foundation; but a few producers keep up the trademark light grassy Lowland malt style.

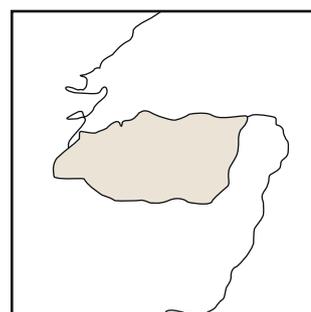

Auchentoshan 12yr Old	6.35
Auchentoshan Three Wood	8.55
Glenkinchie 12yr Old	6.65

Speyside

Broadly speaking, Speyside whiskies can be classified into one of two camps. At one end you have the light grassy "Lunchtime" whiskies, and at the other end of the spectrum lie the rich, sweet, sherried whiskies. Plenty of choice here to find yourself a drinking partner.

Glenlivet 12yr Old	7.95
Glenfiddich 12 yr Old	4.95
Dalwhinnie 15yr Old	7.25
Singleton of Duffytown 12yr Old	7.85
Arbelour 10yr Old	4.95
Glen Elgin 12yr old	7.35
Macallan Double Cask	9.75
Balvennie 12yr Old Doublewood	7.25

As well as our own Whisky bar, we also have Whisky Tasting Notes books available to purchase, so you can log, track and record your whisky adventure both here at The Coachman and beyond.

Cocktails

With Justin (Landlord) and Kaan (Bar Manager) as two classically trained mixologists, you are in safe hands at The Coachman. We offer a Classic Cocktail List, with minimal twists or flips. We prefer to serve the drinks how they were designed, although we have included a couple of our own.

We ONLY use premium spirits and ingredients. We never use manufactured pre-mixes, we don't take shortcuts, and we most certainly do NOT sell frozen or blended cocktails. If you are unsure of whether you will like a drink or not, just ask your server, and they will be able to run you through the cocktails.

Bond, James Bond may have enjoyed his Martinis shaken, but the vast majority of bartenders would caution against this manoeuvre. Shaking can lead to over-dilution and small shards of broken ice in the drink, whereas stirring results in a velvety, well-blended tippie

Long Island Iced Tea

Tale of 2 Origins

When fans of 1920s noir tell the tale, the drink is attributed to one Old Man Bishop, a native of a Kingsport, Tennessee community known as Long Island. During the country's Prohibition era, when a constitutional amendment banned the sale, consumption, and production of alcoholic drinks from 1920 to 1933, resourceful Americans tried their hands at cocktail-crafting. It was during this period when Bishop allegedly combined tequila, vodka, gin, rum, whiskey, and maple syrup and, in a stroke of creativity, called his creation the "Old Man Bishop."

Another origin story holds that the drink wasn't invented until the 1970s, making it the youngest widely known cocktail. In this version, a bartender from Long Island, New York, named Robert Butt created the Long Island Iced Tea during a 1972 cocktail-crafting competition. The story's source? None other than Butt himself. The former Oak Beach Inn bartender claims to have invented the drink as his entry in a contest to create an original cocktail featuring triple sec. Butt asserts that his creation was an instant success, with cocktail lovers around the world enjoying it since the 1980s.
